Its dreams of a caliphate are gone. Now Isis has a deadly new strategy. In Afghanistan, Isis has done so much with so little. In Libya, for example, the group had hundreds of local battle-hardened fighters with experience stretching back to the early years of the Iraq war and who played a pivotal role in early Isis efforts in Syria in 2014, but its fortunes have dwindled over the past two years.

From what I understand Egyptian culture depicts Isis as the mother of Horus. It's interesting to see she is submissive to him in this dream. Pillars in dreams often symbolize the foundation of beliefs and ideals, and the most prominent pillar appears to be that of the eye of Horus, the symbol of protection.
